This summer, I went on a trip to California. When I was on the airplane I looked out the window and saw a ______________, which is an area of flat, open land. The closer we got to California, the more ______________, or small mounds, I saw. As we got close to landing, I looked out the window one last time. On the right side of the plane was a very large body of water, called a(n) ______________. I couldn’t wait to see it up close! On the left side of the plane were the Sierra Nevada ______________, which are very tall with steep sides. My mom said we could go hiking there. Our plane descended and finally landed. I couldn’t wait to see more landforms on our trip!
