

Stay Active With Fitness Tic-Tac-Toe

Who says you have to play Tic-Tac-Toe sitting down? This twist on the classic pencil and paper game offers you and your child a chance to get some fresh air and exercise. Children need at least 30 minutes of physical activity a day to help build strength and coordination, and this is a perfect way to get that crucial time in. Turning fitness into a game helps keep your child's interest and makes physical activity fun. Encourage your child to stay active and help her establish healthy habits that will follow her into adulthood.

What You Need:

- Paper
- Pencil
- Checkers pieces or poker chips in two colors

What You Do:

1. Draw a tic-tac-toe grid (3 x 3 square grid) on a piece of paper.
2. Cut another piece of paper into small slips and write a different fitness activity on each one. Place the slips of paper in a bag or container. You can choose from the list of fitness activities below or think of your own activities.
3. Now that the game is set up, it's time to begin playing! Have each player pick a color. To begin the game, player one plays a chip on the tic-tac-toe board, then picks a fitness activity out of the bag.
4. Both players do the fitness activity.
5. Player two repeats steps 3-4 to take his turn. Continue taking turns playing a chip and picking an activity until one player wins or there is a tie.
