Emily Dickinson

THE MOON WAS BUT A CHIN OF GOLD

The moon was but a chin of gold
A night or two ago,
And now she turns her perfect face
Upon the world below.

Her forehead is of amplest blond;
Her cheek like beryl stone;
Her eye unto the summer dew
The likest I have known.

Her lips of amber never part;
But what must be the smile
Upon her friend she could bestow
Were such her silver will!

And what a privilege to be
But the remotest star!
For certainly her way might pass
Beside your twinkling door.

Her bonnet is the firmament,
The universe her shoe,
The stars the trinkets at her belt,
Her dainties of blue.
Response Questions

THE MOON

• Why do you think Dickinson made the moon a "she"?

• Pretend Dickinson had written about the moon as if it were male. Write three new metaphors she might use to portray the moon as male.